

“As you know, Hudspeth Hall was constructed in 1916 and sat on that site until this past March, and we’re here 50 years later to break ground on it’s replacement.”

“Through the doors of this Centennial Hall, will reside our future teachers, future business men and women, future leaders, volunteers, future tax payers.”

“So we can, as Don said, provide an environment where students can become more engaged on campus. Because we know, with greater engagement, students learn more, they’re more successful while they’re here, and they graduate more frequently on time. So this is phase one, this is going to be a magnificent facility that’s going to enhance the quality of student life.”

West Texas A&M University

Video clips of people at the Centennial Hall Ground Breaking.